

Digital Tech Defentry

Defentry actively defends personal and corporate data

Defentry is a personal cybersecurity company that combats ID hijackings and hacked accounts. Their goal is to create the world's most sophisticated ID-monitoring platform that will create a safer everyday life by allowing people to have control over their own identity – in a simple, relevant and smart way. Defentry believes the next evolution of the Internet will be to create a digital control that allows people, organisations and things to have their own digital identity.

Most corporates are nowadays already aware of the importance of securing their data and there are many products on the market serving this purpose. Driven by the rise of IoT, however, it is the employees who pose an entry point to corporate data, and thus, yet these must be protected to effectively protect the company.

This is where Defentry's cybersecurity platform comes up; helping actively defend personal and corporate data, alerting when stolen credentials are leaked or sold on the black market by monitoring and analysing hacker forums, web pages and the black-market sources for stolen and leaked data. The platform scans governmental, open-web, deep-web and dark-web sources to alert if personal information is changed or leaked. This will help minimise the risk of potential ID thefts, frauds and corporate breaches.

Competitive Advantages

- Local data
- Full coverage
- White label solution
- Educational and mass-market product.

Target Markets

- Banks, Telcos, Security companies, Insurances and Big Data companies
- Nordics, UK, Netherlands, Germany.

Use Cases

- We offer a VAS solution where our service is packaged as an add-on product for our enterprise clients. In their turn they offer our solution to their own B2B and/or B2C-clients. The client downloads an app that helps them monitor if their credentials are stolen and they get alerted whenever their data is found on suspicious places
- We also protect large enterprises' employees by allowing the enterprise the same solution as earlier described.
